

Mark Hennebach, High School

Mark Hennebach grew up in a small town in northern New Jersey. Here he would attend and receive primary and secondary education in this area. He eventually graduated from Millburn High School in Millburn, New Jersey. During his high school career, Mr. Hennebach spent time influencing behavioral and educational spaces in the lives of young children within his community. He would often babysit, teach Sunday school class, and spent his summers as a camp counselor. All of these experiences would assist Mr. Hennebach in discovering his passion for educating and nurturing young lives. He went on to attend Lafayette College in Easton, Pennsylvania. It was there that he earned a Bachelor of Arts in History and Social Studies. But he didn't stop there! Mr. Hennebach proceeded with his educational ambitions and pursued and achieved a Master of Arts Degree in History and Education from the University of Chicago.

With over 30 years of experience in education, Mr. Hennebach has served as an educator in the public, private, and faith-based education sectors. Mark Hennebach joined the F.B.C.S. family in 2017 as the head of our secondary education program. He is currently the primary individual instructing Bible, mathematics, social studies, general sciences, biology, and overseeing dual enrollment and apprenticeship programs.

The Hennebach family loves being together, worshipping, reading God's Word, creating works of art, and having a good laugh. Every Sunday morning, you can find the Hennebach's at First Baptist Church of Stuart leading Life Groups, welcoming new visitors and members, and providing media assistance to ensure our church services are filled with lights, sound, and video.
